The St. Louis Democrat of Thursday contained the following:

It is to be hoped that Gen. Grant, the Commanding General of the Army, will have at least the credit of having gained the victory in the greatest battle that has yet been fought—probably the greatest of the war. The battle was a brilliant, and dashing of the rebel Generals, led the enemy. Full of confidence, and with vastly superior numbers, the rebels advanced to certain victory. He is routed, repulsed, driven back with a loss that is sufficient to paralyze even a larger army than his.

To sustain a generous public sentiment will suffice to silence the voice of party and environmental detraction. Quite possibly, then, may the critics of the war have had a better war, or the supercilious assertion of seeing a pincers' Bబబ. but may plain good sense will judge, in view of results so singularly favorable to the rebels, that field brings the just return of victory, as great as that of Wellington at Waterloo.

Gen. Grant has had more rebel enemies to fight, but he has triumphed over them all. There is reason for the popular inquiry, why Gen. Buell's forces were tardy. Every man in the Union knew it to be a fact, that the rebels in Kentucky fought with all the energy and ability I possessed, under the flag of the Union, until my office was seized by the infamous Davis. But it is a fact, that the rebels in Kentucky fought with all the energy and ability I possessed, under the flag of the Union, until my office was seized by the infamous Davis. How happened the division of Gen. Davis? But it is a fact, that the rebels in Kentucky fought with all the energy and ability I possessed, under the flag of the Union, until my office was seized by the infamous Davis. There are any leaven of envious, malignant spirit in the slow movements of Bell's column?

We should have felt much more gratification in copying and endorsing this compliment to General Grant if it were not coupled with an unjust insinuation against the Democratic and loyalty of General Buell. The Republican leaders have done their best to repeat the experience of last year, when the state election was carried by a coalition of Republicans and Union Democrats, under the name of the Constitutional Party. The Republican party is thought to be strong enough to carry the state alone.

The Albany Evening Journal, one of the leaders mentioned by the World, admits the correctness of this assertion, and proceeds at some length to give reasons why the R. Republican organization should be kept up. There is accordingly no reason to doubt that what the World says here is true. And it is probably as true of the Republican leaders in other States as of the Republican leaders in New York. The R. Republican leaders generally are no doubt bent on keeping up or reviving the Republican organization.

This purpose is unquestionably selfish and unpatriotic. So much is self-evident. How shall this purpose be defeated? By keeping up or reviving the Democratic organization in like manner? This would promote the success of the purpose, instead of defeating it, by furnishing an excuse for carrying out the purpose more speedily than any that now exists,—an excuse so spurious that it would be likely to prevail with the R. publicans masses, which is more than the present excuse are likely to do. Nay, the keeping up of the Democratic organization would promote not only the keeping up of the Republican organization, but the triumph of this organization, by dividing the non-R. publicans of the North, and occasioning a portion of them to swell the full Republican ranks.

The conserves of the North consist of Democrats, Clay Whigs, and Lincoln Republicans. The radicals of the North consist of abolitionists and Fremont Republicans. This analysis exhausts the North. The problem is to combine the Northern conservatives into a single party, and hurl it with overpowering effect against the Northern radicals in whatever shape they may choose to take. How shall this problem be solved? The keeping up of the Republican organization cannot solve the problem; for this, while embracing the abolitionists and Fremont Republicans, would exclude the Democrats and a portion of the Clay Whigs, and would serve to radicalize the combination as a whole. The keeping up of the Democratic organization cannot solve the problem; for this would exclude the Lincoln Republicans and a portion of the Clay Whigs, as well as the abolitionists and Fremont Republicans, and would serve to radicalize the combination as a whole.

Plainly, the only way to solve the problem is to combine the Northern conservatives into a single party, and hurl it with overpowering effect against the Northern radicals in whatever shape they may choose to take. How shall this problem be solved? The keeping up of the Republican organization cannot solve the problem; for this, while embracing the abolitionists and Fremont Republicans, would exclude the Democrats and a portion of the Clay Whigs, and would serve to radicalize the combination as a whole. The keeping up of the Democratic organization cannot solve the problem; for this would exclude the Lincoln Republicans and a portion of the Clay Whigs, as well as the abolitionists and Fremont Republicans, and would serve to radicalize the combination as a whole.

Battle Field, PITTSBURG, TENN., April 10, 1862.

We have won a great battle. The Second Division is famous. H. CLAY.

The author of this despatch is an A. of Gen. Johnson in Brig. Gen. McCook's command, and one of the proudest honors he can ever enjoy is that he is a son of the lamented Henry Clay who fell gloriously at Buena Vista. The despatch was sent to a private friend in this city, and its testimony to the grand and mighty victory of our army in Tennessee was not needed.

For some of the details of the great and dreadful battle, we refer our readers to our regular telegraphic despatches. Whilst writing this, we are anxious to hear from General Buell's pursuit of the flying rebels, but we know that a victory, an immense victory, the most tremendous victory of the war and of modern times, has been won. Our noble Republic is at once in a sea of glory. A blow has been struck which cleaves the Southern Confederacy from its head to its heels. That blow has not yet set any account of the battle which does not admit that Gen. Grant's division on the west bank of the river was overwhelmed on Sunday by the superior numbers of the rebels; that the tide of battle was turned by the appearance of Gen. Buell in the evening; and that the battle was renewed, it was General Buell who outflanked the enemy, and General Buell with his tired soldiers who pursued the broken rebel hordes in the direction of Corinth.

Since we penned the preceding remarks, we have received the St. Louis News, published on the evening of Thursday, which refers to the Democrat's article of the morning of that day. "The News speaks pointedly and truly. The Democrat cannot遮掩 its blinding exultations over the brilliant victory at Pittsburg, with a malvolent and ungenerous effort to make it appear that the rebels are to blame."

The 6th and 7th of April will, we cannot doubt, be immortal days in our country's history and in mankind's. If the fate of the rebel confederacy was decided at Fort Donelson, none can doubt that it is forever settled by the result of the awful conflict that has made the Tennessee run all reddened to the ocean.

The floating battery abandoned by the rebels at Island No. 10 was found stuck in the mud near New Madrid. We expect Hollins' ram will hide its head in the next sand-bank, like an ostrich, to prevent its observation by our gunboats; or, as it is a turtle as well as a ram, it may bury itself in the mud like the turtle.

Confident that the News is correct in its opinion that popular sentiment will sustain Gen. Buell against the aspersions of the Democrat, we take leave of the unpleasant subject in the full conviction, that when the history of the battle of Pittsburg Landing shall be written, no stigma will be found to rest upon the fame of that gallant officer who is so dear to every Kentuckian and to every soldier under his command.

Nothing appears to stand in the way of this desire but the ambition of party leaders, which will disappear or stand aside or fall into line as soon as the people begin to show themselves in earnest. Let the people take this movement into their own hands, and its glorious success will be assured. Responding faithfully, as it does, to the existing condition of things in the North particularly and in the nation generally, it cannot fail, if set on foot, to combine the bulk of the Republican masses with the whole of the non-Republicans of the North, whether the Republican leaders persevere in their present unhappy purpose or not. If they should persevere, they will be put to a huge penalty shall containing little else besides abolitionists and Fremont Republicans. In the severe and exalted state of public sentiment which now marks the loyal part of our country the standard of party cannot be raised anywhere without drawing down upon it its recreant bearers the swift vengeance of the people.

The law, rule, or regulation, or whatever else it may be called, that has been adopted in the Southern Confederacy compelling men to take Confederate paper at par whenever it is proffered in payment of their debts, has produced in many places a very anomalous, not to say amusing, condition of things. Confederate paper being abundant, debtors are anxious to get rid of their obligations by the use of it, whilst creditors, hoping for payment, are as anxious for it to read anything to find out that they are whipped.

They have in Georgia what they call "Deceit Creek." It is perhaps the only decent thing in the State—except the U. S. army.

It seems to be an established meteorological fact, that a heavy discharge of artillery and small arms always brings on rain. Therefore, friends, whenever it rains you may be off, and thinking to have your claims liquidated with this worthless trash, avoid tenders of payment by every means in their power. Persecuting debtors hunt diligently for their creditors everywhere, and the poor persecuted creditors flee and hide from their debtors, shutting themselves up and not daring to venture forth except late at night and on Sunday.

On the 19th of April, 1862, peace was proclaimed throughout the United States after an eight years' war. Let us hope, that on the returning anniversary of that event, our loyal arms will have again conquered a peace throughout the land after one year's effort from the date of the Baltimore riot.

Disloyal men talk much about the liberty of speech. But is not the man who incites a mob by inflammatory words deemed worthy of punishment? How much more then the traitor who attempts to encourage and strengthen with words an armed rebellion against their country or their God?

The old alchemists were not able to discover the Philosopher's stone, Ponzo de Leon couldn't find the fountain of eternal youth, and vain are all the searches of the rebels after "the last ditch."

The Rochester Democrat says that "slavery cannot possibly emerge from this war as it entered it." We don't believe that it will be challenged now.
